17. VII. 14

Im Laufe des Vormittags bessert sich das Wetter, nur ein heftiger Sturm wütet noch, hoffentlich als Ausklang der schlimmsten Tage.

Briefe: [Brief]OJ 15/16, [23]

von Dahms [Walter Dahms], wie immer herzlich ergeben u. ausführlich; von Frau Deutsch [Sofie Deutsch] Karte; von Artur [Artur Pollak] u. Floriz [Moriz Violin] Karten.

July 17, 1914.

During the morning the weather improves; only a hefty storm continues to threaten, signaling the conclusion – one hopes – of the worst days.

Letters: [letter]OJ 15/16, [23]

from Weisse [Hans Weisse], the essays¹ returned by express delivery; [letter]OJ 10/1, [6]

[http://www.schenkerdocumentsonline.org/documents/correspondence/OJ-10-1_6.html]

from Dahms [Walter Dahms], cordial and comprehensive as ever. Postcard from Mrs. Deutsch [Sofie Deutsch], and postcards from Artur [Artur Pollak] and Floriz [Moriz Violin].

Footnotes

¹ Copies, sent July 14 (see diary entry for that day), of Alexander Berrsche, "Der Triller bei den Klassikern," Münchener Zeitung, May 29, 1914 (discussing the trill theory in Schenker's Beitrag zur Ornamentik), and an article of the same title by Eduard Bach and response by Alexander Berrsche, ibid, June 9, 1914. There are clippings of both articles in Schenker's scrapbook, OC 2/p. 44.
